...ahead of an anticipated season of fruitful mission

Step back for a moment...

Church life and mission can be relentless. Week after week come in waves, season hard up against season. Continually dealing with the immediate can easily lead churches to lose a clear sense of the big picture.

When you're desperately keeping your head above water, it's hard to remember the direction you are meant to be swimming! It's not meant to be like that. We were created for rhythms of work and Sabbath, to do God's work, but not to become lost in it.

reVision is a process designed to help churches step back, seek God, discern his call, and prepare for a fresh season of fruitful mission.

KEY QUESTIONS

What has God been doing in, through, and around us in previous seasons?

To whom are we sent?

What harvest does God expect?

How is God preparing us for the season ahead? What will we no longer need?

What must we take up?

Andrew Turner, Church Development Facilitator for the Baptist Churches of SA, is available to assist churches through the reVision process in a way that is:

Timely—so the church is able to step back and effectively reflect, discern and plan without unduly losing mission opportunities and momentum;

Flexible—so that the process is made to fit the church, rather than the other way around;

Simple—so that realistic recommendations can be identified without getting lost in consultation mode;

Exemplary—so that church leaders are equipped to lead similar processes in future;

Refreshing—so that leaders and members are inspired and reinvigorated as they engage in the process; and Useful—so that the church's next season of fruitful mission can be entered with clarity of call, confidence in God, and anticipation of what He will do in and through us.
